March 11, 2011

Galaxy Macau announced this week that it has appointed leading wine expert Jeannie Cho Lee the resort's Master of Wine.

According to the press statement, Ms. Lee will oversee the development of Galaxy Macau's carefully selected wine list, food pairing aspects and a series of dinners, seminars and other special events.

According to the company's executives, "Ms. Lee's acumen as well as her Asian wine expertise and heritage clearly reflect the 'World Class, Asian Heart' positioning of the property, helping immediately establish the international calibre of its food and beverage offerings while also cementing its leadership in Asian cuisine and wine pairing".

"I respected and agreed with Galaxy Macau's platform on being a resort by Asians, for Asians," the wine expert said in the press release.

"From a food and beverage perspective, we have a philosophical synergy – their focus on Asian tastes is in line with what I've been researching and studying for years."

Galaxy Macau promises to offer boutique wines "that are not easily found in Asia". Furthermore, the company "will put significant emphasis on Burgundy and the red Pinot Noir grape, based on Ms. Lee's belief that Pinot Noir is a truly exceptional and versatile red grape that pairs well with a variety of Asian cuisines".

The property will also offer several wines made in Asia. "I have already selected more than 20 Asian wines for the property's master wine list, from countries such as China, India, Japan and Thailand, and this number will continue to grow," she said.
